Verbal Description:

This censer fragment is coated with a white substance (ash deposit?). The inside is rough and uneven, with a change in the surface near the rim - possibly where it was applied. The top of the rim is flat with the outer edge painted red. The outer wall is divided into three rectangular areas by deep, wide vertical incisions. On the top of the left area are 3 horizontal incisions above some other incisions and brushstrokes which are covered with the white substance. The middle section is painted red with no visible incisions. On the right there are 3 horizontal incisions along the top - any other incisions are too vague to document.
